With F.M.I.

CHANGES...

Businesses under $100,000 retail volume annually have been granted okay by Cost of Living Council to move from under economic controls.

Same applies to smaller renters, exempting about 10 million of the 23.6 million renter occupied housing units.

Exemptions do not apply to service-type businesses like laundries, restaurants, repair service stores and similar businesses.

Reason we mention this item is the remaining relative large number of individually owned businesses in Milam County, which in Cameron, for instance, have been expanding to keep up with modern merchandising.

NOW-NOW-NOW

Business seems either to have gone to the corporate size enterprise or to the special service, highly skilled small business with a few or no employees.

The middle size operation is being squeezed by expertise on the one side and by price competition on the other hand.

The surviving businesses in this day have gone through more technical adjustment, economic convulsion and legal imposition than any time in any nation's history.

Business, profession and the individual have to be responsive to change even when government at times at certain levels is not. The individual is being ruptured by these pressures from both sides in a climate unfavorable to a decent profit motive, not exploitation.

The alternative is not working so well. China and Russia are invoking elements of incentive in their systems to raise not only production, but to give their creative and productive people some sense of worth in a system whose problems required group solution, but which ultimately must face individual need.

UR Engineering To Start Soon

Engineering in the urban renewal project will begin in early February, according to A. W. McCullin, Cameron Urban Renewal Agency executive director.

This will include checking grades on streets and sidewalks, water and sewer lines as well as storm drainage.

In a public progress report, McCullin said the agency will soon start advertising properties in the urban renewal area for sale, and "we hope these might be purchased by local people for new businesses," he said. Buildings must be built on land purchased in the project area, he added.

"We have new businesses interested in locating in Cameron," McCullin continued, "and when we complete this project, we hope to have all buildings occupied and new buildings on the lots which have been cleared."

Loan contracts have been finalized as well as contracts for new buildings or rehabbed buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Irving Bornfeld, of Irving's Department Store, plan to rehab three buildings -- the old Milam Theater and two Monroe buildings next to the old theater. Wright Agency (Montgomery Ward) plan to remodel their buildings, which include the office occupied by the Farm Bureau.

Other construction and rehabbing is going ahead on schedule.

A committee has been appointed by the Urban Renewal Agency to serve on the development of the mall-park area and work is underway to develop background materials. The committee is made up of different age groups with special emphasis on youth, McCullin said.

Suggestions will be taken by the following committee members: Mrs. Bob Ellett, Mrs. Perry Holder, Mrs. Ed Magre, Mrs. Delbert Burlison, Miss Christine Laws, James Kahler, Mrs. Jean Lester Dase, Mrs. Leo Fuchs, Mrs. J. A. Bowling, Rev. Pete McCabe, Odell Biggs, Mrs. Bea

Alcoa RW To Layoff 13 Salaried Employees

Thirteen salaried employees will go on layoff status Monday, January 31, at Aluminum Company of America's Rockdale Works in a continuing effort to cut costs and keep the firm's largest smelter competitive during the industry's present soft market, according to Fred P. Bergeron, works manager.

Bergeron also said that several departmental adjustments and job changes are being made, with seniority and individual performance the governing factors.

"Alcoa has been hit by a cost-price squeeze that's prompting a lot of belt-tightening at every location to preserve the slightest of profit margins and stay in operation," the Alcoa official said.

"Cost reductions are the only way out of our present situation and that, of course, means greater efficiency in every area along with personnel adjustments."

Rockdale Works is one of Alcoa's seven domestic aluminum plants that has cut production within the last year. Bergeron said that Alcoa, the world's leading producer of primary aluminum, is operating its eight U. S. smelters at about 83 per cent capacity.

Pond Creek Watershed Funds OK'd

The Pond Creek Watershed project has been approved for funds and work on gaining easements will be started soon.

Wayne Mann, local Soil Conservation Service director, said the project involves more than 40,000 acres in Milam County with the remainder of a total of 146,000 acres in Falls county.

Pond Creek and its tributary, Little Pond Creek, run through the northeast portion of the county. Extensive channel work is planned for Little Pond Creek, Mann said.

Six of the total 22 flood-retarding structures will be built in Milam. Some of the structures will create large reservoirs with draw-down facilities to let flood water out slowly into the creek.

Special emphasis in the watershed will be given to accelerating or speeding up of conservation measures to be applied to the land to better protect the applied structures.

Sponsors of the Pond Creek Watershed are the Commissioners' Courts of Milam and Falls counties, the Pond Creek Watershed Authority, and the Central Texas Soil and Water Conservation District.

Flu Infection Wanes; School Absentees Drop

A flu-like viral infection that had caused high absenteeism in Cameron schools and businesses last week appeared to be waning by weeks end. School absentees due to illness dropped from 165 at mid-week to 125 by Friday.

Dr. C. G. Swift, director of the Milam County Health Unit, said the illness was not at epidemic level but he said "we are having more cases than we normally see at this season."

Dr. Swift said there had been no confirmed cases of the Hong Kong flu reported in other parts of the country, however he said the symptoms were similar to those experienced by patients with viral infection.

He said doctors were suggesting that patients with the illness stay away from work or school for two or three days, but added that the effects of the infection (weakness and cough) will last two to three weeks.

Milam Health Unit Protects County

The unimposing offices of the Milam County Health Unit in Cameron became a center of importance for about 5,000 Milam Countians last fall when a diphtheria scare proved that the local health unit was prepared to move quickly and efficiently in a public health emergency.

The diphtheria immunizations not only focused attention on the Health Unit, it also showed that far from just being a service for the poor, the unit benefits everyone when health problems are solved whether it is the control of food sanitation, maintenance of a pure water supply, or follow-up nursing visits in control of communicable disease.

The idea for a public health facility started in 1939 when Rev. J. P. Love, rector of the small Episcopal Church at Cameron, set aside a room in his church and provided living quarters at his home for a nurse to introduce health education to the City of Cameron and outlying neighborhoods. This proved so popular that Milam County began paying the nurse's salary and as all good stories go, in 1940 completed plans to organize a county-wide health unit.

Services at the Health Unit today range from family planning through pre-natal care, childrens immunizations, tuberculosis control, home nursing care for elderly and care for crippled children.

Also under the Milam Health Unit service is sanitation control in public eating establishments, nursing homes, day care centers and foster homes.

The five members of the Health Unit staff include Dr. C. G. Swift, acting director, Rodrick Holcomb, sanitation officer, Mrs. Jo Laywell and Mrs. Jane Cunningham, nurses, and Mrs. Martha Adams, secretary.

Jointly funded by the state and Milam County, the Health Unit holds clinics Monday afternoon and all day Thursday in Cameron, 1st and 3rd Tuesdays in Rockdale and 2nd and 4th Tuesdays in Thorndale. They also compile records of communicable diseases reported in Milam County to guard against epidemics.

A review of Health Unit services through 1971 shows:

Communicable disease immunizations, 9,944; venereal disease office visits, 310; and treatments 40;

Medicare home visits - 169;

Tuberculosis control - 36 patients on case register, 23 patients on medicine, 446 home and office visits, 1,266 Tuberculin skin tests (including 1st and 7th grades in Milam schools) that showed 80 positive reactors, 112 x-rays;

Maternity service - 14 caseload, 32 visits;

Cancer control - 57 pap smears, 1 positive;

Child health services - 12 caseload, 92 home and office visits;

Crippled children services - 53 caseload, 103 home and office visits, 8 children diagnosed as congenital heart defects;

Adult health services (cardiovascular and chronic diseases - 937 visits;

Diabetes screening program - 265 tests, 2 cases found;

Family planning services - 84 caseload.

A Fulltime DA?

It may be a good time for attorneys and judges in the 20th District Court area to consider establishment or re-establishment of the office of district attorney.

Since incumbent County-Dist. Atty. John B. Henderson, Jr., has announced retirement to private practice, no attorney practicing in Milam County has openly stated interest in running, likely because the pay is low, compared to what practicing attorneys are making.

Your Herald suggests the prospect of opening up a district attorney's office, pay for which would be made by both Milam and Robertson Counties, and that the post of county attorney, which would become more a parttime post, would be more interesting to practicing attorneys who could carry the county court load, both civil and criminal, as well as have time for private practice.

The way it is now, there is enough load in the Milam end of 20th District Court and in Milam County Court to require most of the official's time in office. The reality is if he cannot practice enough on the side, his income discourages his wanting to stay in office, no matter how much he likes the work.

Lawyers of the two counties may find this an alternative. And county commissioners might see this as an alternative in a time when law enforcement is a public concern taking new directions, requiring new expertise and more attention to these problems, not less.

ZOO NEGLECT PROMPTS $5 MILLION REQUEST

REP. FERNAND ST. GERMAIN (R-I.) "I am submitting a bill to encourage through the use of matching grants, projects to improve and maintain the health and environmental conditions of animals in zoos owned and operated by counties and municipalities for the general public.

"I have been very disturbed over the thoughtless treatment of many of our wild and caged birds and animals by both institutions and private citizens.

"Many of our zoos are not receiving proper funding or civic support. As a result, far too many of these animals are not properly quartered or cared for. The problems are not difficult to comprehend. ...

"Animals who traveled in packs or herds are kept singly, their only form of exercise a narrow running path.

"Neither adequate facilities nor sufficient veterinary care exists, especially in the smaller zoos, to properly care for sick and aging animals.

"Cleanliness of the animals and their living quarters is too often neglected. ...

"The matching grants will encourage those cities and counties who have an initial interest and awareness of these problems to take the next step and plan for their solution.

Election Reforms Provide New Systems For Democratic Party

By Joel N. Shurkin
Reuter Correspondent

NEW YORK

Out of the blood and tear gas of the 1968 Democratic national convention in Chicago came election reforms that could completely revolutionize the party and, eventually, the way Americans select their president.

The first tests of the new system come later this month in Mississippi and Iowa. Among other things the system could take all the drama and suspense out of the Democratic convention this summer and make it merely a ceremony.

The reforms take some of the importance out of the primaries. They also make it possible for some of the minority candidates to go into the convention with at least parts of the various state delegations.

What the Democrats have done is try to give the nomination process back to the people and out of reach of political bosses in smoke-filled rooms.

The main thing threatening the plan this year is the extra-ordinary number of candidates running for the nomination. That could settle up the convention that the bosses could have the final say.

Two-thirds of the 3,016 delegates to the Miami convention will be selected in primaries. The remaining third will be picked by congressional districts and state conventions.

UNIT RULE OUT

Besides eliminating the unit rule -- in which the candidate with the most votes in a state delegation got all the state's votes -- the Democrats have provided for delegate selection by congressional districts.

Seventy-five percent of the delegates in states adopting the reform rules can come from the districts. This means a candidate can find those districts in which he is likely to be popular, concentrate on them, and, if successful, know he will get at least some of the votes from that state delegation.

In the 28 states that hold conventions delegates are supposed to be pledged to various candidates. This means the days of the uncommitted delegations could be numbered.

Iowa is a convention state. On Jan. 24, more than a month before New Hampshire holds its usual first-in-the-nation primary, Iowa Democrats will meet in precinct caucuses and choose delegates for county conventions. The county conventions will select delegates for congressional district conventions, which in turn will elect a state convention.

If a candidate gets 15 per cent or more of the vote at any precinct convention he gets at least that much at the county, district, and at the state level.

Theoretically then, it should be possible by late January to tell how the Iowa delegation will look in Miami. This eliminates the importance of primaries which used to be the only way people could tell who was beating who.

BOSSSES CAN'T HIDE

It also makes it very difficult for political bosses to hide the selection process. In some states it was not uncommon for the bosses to call conventions at remote places and at inconvenient times to assure control.

The pressure against uncommitted delegations, for instance, makes it difficult for someone like Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago to go to Miami with an uncommitted and numerically powerful delegation that Daley can give to the highest political bidder.

The new system is not without the possibility of manipulation, however. The AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE) has told its local members to support whatever candidate seems to be the winner in any congressional district convention. This could mean a powerful labor bloc should the convention be deadlocked.

But it is now possible a Democratic candidate could tie up the nomination weeks before the Democratic convention, rendering it a ceremony.

IGNORING PRIMARIES

A similar thing happened to the Republicans in 1964 when Sen. Barry Goldwater, working quietly and effectively, tied up enough delegates so that when the Republicans met in San Francisco the was was already over. Goldwater did it by ignoring the primaries.

A Democratic candidate can do the same.

Indeed many of the candidates seem to be following this route. Few of the candidates are botherin with New Hampshire. But many are putting their efforts to the convention states. John V. Lindsay of New York, for instance, has put great emphasis on Iowa.

Several things could frustrate the reformers, led mostly by Sen. George McGovern, now one of the candidates.

LOUISIANA BALKED

One state could refuse to obey the new rules. One, Louisiana, has balked. Under the plan a state refusing to obey could be denied seats at the convention but this would not be an easy thing to do.

Some leaders could convince delegates to remain uncommitted which would give strong leaders bargaining power in Miami. Daley is trying to do this in Illinois.

What could frustrate the plan most of all would be the sheer numbers of candidates. There are about eight candidates or probable candidates now.

If many of them do not drop off by late spring they could so split the delegation the nomination could go back into the smoke-filled room.

Fish Have It Soft

AUSTIN Chances are good that you have never received a set of fish knives for Christmas or put fish tenderizer on your shopping list.

The chances are good because these are non-existent products. They are non-existent because there is no market for them. Fish is naturally tender. You can cut it with a fork.

Swimming is easy for a fish, so there is no connective tissue or over-developed muscles. This makes fish easily digestible, even for the old folks.

There is no problem carving and serving fish. Don't worry about the grain, just cut the flesh from the bones. To test if it is done, just probe it with a fork. If it is ready, the fish will flake easily.

Guidelines For Buying Used Car

In the market for a used car? Better keep your wits about you, said Mrs. Bonnie Fowler, Extension specialist in home management at Texas A&M University. "Use these guidelines when choosing a used car," she said. "Begin by carefully inspecting both the inside and outside of the car.

Look for signs of wear and age in repainted areas along body sides, rust spots around body edges and inside the trunk and torn or worn seats, upholstery and floor mats. Dampness or rust under floor mats and broken windows or ill-fitting doors may also be signs of wear. "Next, operate all switches and controls," the specialist advised. "Try door handles, window cranks, vents and seat adjustments. Start the engine with the hood up; listen for unusual grinding, hissing or grating noises."

Mrs. Fowler also suggested checking the car's mileage. "Low mileage on an older car should be questioned," she said. "A good mechanic can tell if the mileage reading has been changed."

"Take the car for a road test and listen for squeaks, rattles, knocks and other unusual noises. Look for such things as a smooth start, tight and even steering, quick engine pick-up and a radiator that doesn't overheat."

Ask about a guarantee on the car. A common type of used car guarantee is one that lasts 30 days, with cost of repairs split 50-50 between the buyer and the seller. "Verbal promises should be put in writing," she pointed out.

"Take the car to a competent, reputable mechanic for a thorough check-up. Ask the mechanic to test drive the car. Money spent for a check-up before buying may save many dollars later on. Question the dealer who refuses to let you get a car check-up from an impartial source."

The specialist suggested visiting more than one used car dealer. "Be suspicious of the dealer who has a car lot that's surrounded by signs like 'fantastic discounts!' and 'we undersell everybody.' Also be wary of the salesman who tries to pressure you into a quick sale."

"Keep in mind that the dealer who has shop facilities and mechanics has the resources at hand to put a used car in shape and to stand behind his warranty. Before buying a particular model of used car, you may want to look up old issues of impartial consumer buying guides to see what was reported about the car when it first hit the market."

Mrs. Fowler said that used cars don't go just to people who can't afford the price of a new car. "Some money managers decide to avoid the cost of depreciation on the first year or two of a car's life. Other families look to the used car market for a second or third family car."

"Whatever your reasons for buying a used car, be sure to take your time in making a decision on a car. And happy driving!"

Kilimanjaro Towers Above New International Airport

By Alan Thomas
Reuter Correspondent

SANYA PLAINS, TANZANIA
Where elephants once roamed free on the Sanya Plains at the foot of Mount Kilimanjaro, jumbo jets can now land hundreds of tourists at a time.

The snow-capped peak of Africa's highest mountain towers above the new Kilimanjaro International Airport.

Already hailed by Tanzanian tourist officials as the new "Gateway to Africa", the 14 million dollar Italian-built project is aimed at attracting visitors direct from America and Europe to the heart of some of Africa's finest game reserves.

In the past, the emerging Tanzanian tourist industry has had to put up with free-spending tourists using neighboring Kenya as a base for "safaris" into Tanzanian attractions.

This meant badly needed foreign exchange which was not entering the Tanzanian economy.

The government is now embarked on a major campaign to boost tourism, with more hotels planned, especially near the country's game parks, and with more publicity abroad.

Tanzania earned nearly 15 million dollars in foreign exchange from tourism in the 1970-71 financial year, as a total of 63,000 foreign tourists visited the country, compared with 51,000 the previous year. The target for 1973-73 is 120,000.

The Sanya plains site of Tanzania's second international airport -- with its 65 - yard wide runway stretching 4,000 yards -- was once a paradise for wildlife.

But the roar of the lion has given way to that of jetliners, the first of which touched down shortly before President Julius Nyerere officially inaugurated the showpiece airport as part of his country's 10 anniversary celebrations in December.

Twenty months earlier he had laid the foundation stone for the modern terminal buildings, which lie midway between the northern towns of Arusha and Moshi, 300 miles northwest of the capital, Dar es Salaam.

When the installation of modern technical aids and full facilities has been completed, officials hope international airlines and charter flights will regularly use the picturesque airport, which will be able to handle well over 500,000 passengers a year.

One major problem has been the shortage of first-class hotel accommodation in the region. It is reliably estimated that the existing northern hotels and lodges are at peak season having to turn away two to three tourists for every one they can offer a bed.

Venezuelans To Settle In Jungles

By Uli Schmetzer
Reuter Correspondent

CARACAS VENEZUELA
About 3,000 Venezuelan pioneers will be "transplanted" to the Amazon jungles on the borders of Brazil and Guyana in the next few months.

The move is designed to settle the underpopulated eastern regions. The Venezuelan government is concerned that its mineral-rich Amazon borders are being exploited by people from neighboring countries, who can cross the uncontrolled boundaries freely.

The president of the Agricultural Federation (Federagro), Avier Perez Rodriguez, said a pioneer group of 150 families would settle the lonely borders.

He added that over 3,000 enthusiastic landless peasants had applied for aid to trek to the eastern and southern borders. The government has promised them 99-year leases on any land they wish to occupy.

At the same time the government has pledged the virgin land settlers long-term loans to purchase agricultural machinery.

Volunteer doctors and agricultural experts will accompany the peasants to help establish new communities at the best locations.

The first 150 families must be settled before the great rains come in April. "After that we will decide how many thousands more we can safely allow to settle in this forgotten region of Venezuela," Perez Rodriguez said.

The border settlement plan followed army reports that both neighboring Brazil and Colombia have consolidated their parts of the border and their settlers are freely passing into Venezuela to mine gold and diamonds from rich jungle deposits.

According to reports, the few Venezuelan citizens living at the border had been absorbed by Brazilian and Colombian frontier villages where they found housing and permanent food supplies.

But the state-run Tanzania Tourist Corporation has announced plans for a 400-bed luxury hotel at Arusha and a 150-bed Kilimanjaro Lodge to help accommodate the expected inflow of tourists.

"They now live in other countries and only cross the border to work in Venezuela. Naturally they take the fruits of their labor with them into the neighboring countries," a government spokesman said.

Small military detachments dotted along the rough border will guard the new settlers and ensure better control over movement to and from the rich Amazon section owned by Venezuela.

"Nobody thinks our neighbors have any aggression against Venezuela in mind but the truth is they have given more attention to our forgotten border areas than we have," Senor Perez Rodriguez said.

"All these zones have excellent soil for agriculture," he added.

To bring civilization to the forgotten east, accessible often only by mule tracks or helicopters, Venezuela's public works ministry is planning an extensive border road to link the new settlements not only with each other but with major cities.

Venezuela's government has recently come under fire for neglecting its Amazon property, considered by scientists as potentially one of the wealthiest areas on the South American continent.

The Amazon treasure chest hold diamond and gold deposits, iron, lead, zinc and other minerals hidden in the tropical jungle.

Meanwhile the military is reported to have sent a hard-hitting report to the government demanding immediate development attention for the "forgotten Amazon."

The army says it cannot patrol the borders without the aid of settlers who report movements of foreign workers infiltrating the country or working Venezuelan ore and mineral deposits.

Workmen Unearth City

By Michael Hayes

CORDOBA, Spain

Workmen have unearthed what archeologists believe to be a major find -- the ruins of a huge city from which caliphs once ruled Moorish Spain.

Exploratory excavations show that mediaeval Arabic documents describing the city did not exaggerate when they said about one million people lived in it at the height of the Moorish occupation of Iberia, making it by far the largest city in the western world at that time.

So far, archeologists working under the direction of Felix Hernandez, the fine arts office director, have uncovered a major segment of the city's external wall, public open - air baths and rooms of the caliph's palace that could have been his harem quarters.

Hernandez, considered one of the world's leading authorities on Moorish Spain said ancient Cordoba covered an extremely large area. The caliph's palace and its gardens extended for some five acres.

Brickwork uncovered since digging began early in December has proved to be in excellent condition, with the original red paint still bright, he said.

Archeologists have also uncovered some fine examples of Moorish ceramic tiles, what appears to be a main gateway to the place in the city wall, and a large patio with two decorated fountains.

The Moors invaded Cordoba early in the eighth century and after routing the Goths who at that time held sway, set up their provincial capital here.

The first caliph (ruler), Abd-er-Rahman I, quickly turned the city into a major political and cultural center and within a couple of centuries Cordoba was rivalled only by middle eastern Byzantium in importance in the Mohammedan world.

The excavations, according to Hernandez, are already proving what was believed for a long time -- that Moorish Cordoba was a large, well ordered city with paved streets, airy public squares, homes with private baths and above all a sumptuous palace.

The walled outline of the palace is beginning to appear as digging progresses under the residence of the Roman Catholic Bishop of Cordoba, itself an historic building.

The excavations are expected to continue well into 1972.

Foresters estimate production could be tripled from present forest lands with improved management.

Scientists Probe Hot Water Holes

By John Ira Petty

LOS ALAMOS, N.M.

By drilling two holes deep into the earth near the crater of a huge extinct volcano, scientists at Los Alamos scientific laboratory hope to prove that geothermal energy can be extracted in regions where no natural hot-water reservoirs exist.

They have proposed an experiment they believe will show that heat can be extracted from dry and hot regions and converted to electricity. The experiment would involve drilling the holes to depths where rocks are sufficiently hot, then circulating water from the surface down the hole, through the hole area and up another hole.

Morton C. Smith, a laboratory scientist managing the project, says there are two areas suitable for such an experiment in New Mexico alone, and that there are hundreds of cubic miles of hot rocks in those areas. "There is enough energy there, if we could get it all out, to supply the requirements of the United States for many years," he said.

The laboratory, where the first atomic bomb was developed, is expected to ask for money to begin the experiment in its budget request for the next fiscal year.

Scientists expect to find rocks hot enough for their purposes -- around 600 degrees Fahrenheit -- at about 15,000 feet below the surface, well within the range of modern oil - well drilling equipment.

Smith said that the project involved application of already developed technology. One laboratory report said that if the project was funded, the first heat extraction could be only a few months away.

The proposal calls for drilling outside the Jemez Caldera, the crater of an extinct volcano 18 miles across. The drilling site is owned by the federal government and is near Los Alamos.

After the first hole is drilled, the rock near its bottom would be made to crack, using a technique called hydraulic fracturing. The fracture zone would be in the shape of a disc on edge with a radius of about 1,500 feet.

The second hole would be drilled 20 to 30 feet from the first and would reach only the top of the zone of cracks.

Water pumped down the first hole would circulate through the fracture zone where it would be heated. Then it would be forced up the second hole to the surface. There it would pass through a heat exchanger similar to those now used in nuclear power plants.

Once the water is circulating, pumping could be discontinued. Natural convection would keep the water moving. It would remain liquid under pressure in spite of the heat.

As the rock at the bottom of the holes cools, additional cracking would take place, exposing new hot surfaces and calling for the addition of small amounts of water to the system. The scientists say that such additional cracking would extend the life of a geothermal energy plant.

USEFUL BEETLES

Melbourne, Australia, Reuter - Thousands of beetles, flown in from southern Africa are to be released in New South Wales and Victoria. The insects eat cattle dung and destroy flies through removing their breeding grounds.

An important message for people who prepare their own income tax returns.

Maybe you've been cheating yourself all these years.

Every year, between January and April, millions of people sit down to do battle with Uncle Sam. Some are "self styled" accountants. Others think they can save a few dollars doing it themselves -- so why not.

The sad truth is, however, no matter what their reason was for starting, many of them end the same. On the short end.

You see, when it comes to income taxes, amateurs should depend on H&R Block. We have all the facilities to help you make "income tax time" a pleasant experience. To begin with, H&R Block now has over 6,000 conveniently located offices manned by thousands of specially trained personnel who are anxious to help you. They'll sit you down over a free cup of coffee and show you some things about your income tax that you might never have known existed. For example, do you know all about deductions for child care or casualty losses? And maybe you aren't aware that if your income increased last year, you may be able to save tax dollars by "income averaging."

Well, when it comes to income taxes, H&R Block is aware of just about everything because we're a company that eats, sleeps, and drinks tax returns 365 days a year.

Yes, maybe you can save a couple of bucks by doing your own return but it really may be costing you a lot more by not having your return done by H&R Block.

Wall-Hung Table Useful

A fold-down table in utility or family room offers a convenient area for folding laundry, assembling fabric and patterns when sewing, wrapping gifts and other jobs.

The tabletop, of edge-glued boards or 3/4-inch plywood, is hinged to and encloses a "box" of shelves, built of 1x10-inch western pine or hemlock and attached to the wall.

A frame of 2x2-inch lumber is hinged to the face of the table and folds down to become legs when the table top is lowered. When closed, the frame can set off a favorite print of colorful fabric as a room accent.

Working height for a table is usually 36 inches. Heavy-duty magnets and side latch keep table top closed.

Ample storage is provided by three or four shelves. The higher shelves offer safe storage for infrequently used cleaning or laundry solutions.

Family Medical Record Offers Important Health Guidance

By EVE WENGLER

Ever wish that you had a family health record, easy to read and complete with the facts you should have on hand?

The National Foundation-March of Dimes, in conjunction with the American Medical Association and Woman's Day magazine, has devised an important new tool to make keeping track of a family's medical history simple and clear. It is a four-page form called the Family Medical Record and, when kept up to date, it becomes a valuable document upon which both the family and physician will depend. It provides a quick, comprehensive profile of each family member's health status as well as a record of possible contributing factors in certain conditions.

The Record, accompanied by an article by Dr. Virginia Apgar, the Foundation's vice-president for medical affairs, appears in the January issue of Woman's Day, currently available.

Ideally, the Medical Record should be started before a couple marries, so that when the woman becomes pregnant—or even before—her doctor will already have information about her health history and background and that of her husband, and their parents, sisters and brothers.

Family Data

Since many conditions may follow a definite genetic pattern, awareness of a disease in one member of the family may alert a doctor to early symptoms in time to avert advanced disease or disability. The age of the family member when the disease first appeared is relevant to the type or severity of some disorders and should be recorded.

So should his or her line of work, since some occupations expose workers to environmental factors which affect health. For example, a brother-in-law's chronic lung condition might be related to asbestos inhaled in his work at construction sites; a sister's miscarriages might be related to her work involving anesthetics.

But it is not just poor health or disease that should be recorded on the form. Information about good health also communicates pertinent information to a doctor.

Child Health

Details of each child's birth should be carefully noted as should incomplete pregnancies brought about by miscarriage, abortion, or stillbirth. The form has instructions about when children should be vaccinated for rubella (German measles), diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, polio, regular measles, smallpox, and all the various boosters. It provides space for an immunization record; periodic physical examinations; medications; allergies; and a record of family illnesses.

"The importance of a Family Medical Record cannot be emphasized enough," says Dr. Apgar. "With it a family and its various doctors are in a much better position to maintain good health and plan for better medical care. A record of the health of the family as a whole demonstrates responsibility, and being responsible is an important part in the battle against congenital disease, periodic illness and birth defects."

Diagnostic Tool

Dr. Apgar developed the widely used Apgar score, which rates newborn babies' respiration, muscle tone, reflexes, heart rate and color. It is a quick check, one minute after birth, to determine whether the baby needs special attention in the delivery room. Sometimes this score also will provide a clue to some difficulty the child may have later in life. For that reason, it should be included in the Medical Record.

"If the Medical Record is faithfully kept, it can help with school, travel or insurance requirements and routine medical consultations, and also can be an invaluable diagnostic tool for the family physician," says Dr. Apgar. "Doctors have less and less time to delve into a person's health background, and many people don't remember or are not equipped to answer some of the questions the doctor does ask."

A free copy of the Family Medical Record can be obtained by writing—together with a stamped, self-addressed envelope—to Family Medical Record, The National Foundation-March of Dimes, Box 2000, White Plains, New York 10602.

Gray Wolf Myth Persists In Texas

AUSTIN — Despite widespread belief to the contrary, there are no timber wolves in Texas. Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist Dennis N. Russell, who has conducted studies of the Texas red wolf, said the gray or timber wolf (Canis lupus) has gone the way of the buffalo and grizzly bear as an extinct species in the state.

Therefore, the tiny group of approximately 100 red wolves in the state's south-east corner are the only representatives of the famed wolf clan.

Russell said the persistent reports of "wolves" from virtually every region of the state usually result from misidentification of large coyotes. Also adding to the confusion is the tendency of Texans to interchange the names "wolf" and "coyote" when talking about coyotes. The timber or gray wolf also called lobo or prairie wolf, once roamed most of Texas following the great migrating herds of bison. When the bison was eliminated as a wild animal, the gray wolf's demise was sealed as well.

Russell said the nearest population of gray wolves to Texas is a small group in Northern Mexico, several hundred miles south of Texas' Big Bend region.

He said the last documented appearance of a true gray wolf in Texas in recent history was an animal shot by a hunter in the Chinati Mountains west of Big Bend National Park in 1969. The appearance of such a straggler in Texas has to be considered extremely rare, said Russell.

In fact, Russell said, the gray wolf is virtually extinct in most of the United States. The only known breeding populations of any size occur in parts of Michigan and in isolated areas of the Northern Rockies such as Montana.

Russell pointed out that there should be little difficulty in distinguishing a true gray wolf from a coyote.

GUN EXPORTS UP

Madrid, Reuter - Spanish firearm exports in the first half of 1971 were up 30 percent over the same period of 1970, according to figures published here. The United States was the biggest buyer of the weapons, mostly hunting guns, target pistols, and revolvers.

Coyotes rarely exceed 45 pounds in weight, while an adult wolf is usually in excess of 50 to 60 pounds and may weigh as much as 175.

Litter In Woods Ugly, Dangerous

Litter is not only unsightly, but some of it is also a threat to wildlife, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

For example, fishermen with backlashes in their monofilament may think that because the line is practically invisible, it is alright to discard it along the shore.

But to ducks, monofilament looks tasty, and when they eat it, the line gets stuck in their throat. This leads to starvation for the unfortunate duck.

Equally bad is the surplus paper from the quick-developing cameras. The chemical on the paper is toxic and has been fatal to many species of wildlife.

Cans and food containers are dangerous to wildlife.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week new members of the National Honor Society added some zing to their dress. Or how about Craig Frie-

Badgerettes Down Troy

The Buckholts Badgerettes muffed Troy's hopes for victory there Jan. 18 by taking the girls game 43-32. The game put the Badgerettes 4-0 in district action.

Linda Marek paced the Badgerettes with 23 points. Debra McNeill and Nancy Vaculin each racked in 7 points. Jessie Webb rallied for 6 points before she injured her right knee in the second quarter. Marcia Barkeremeyer also works as BHS forward. The Badgerettes stepped up to 67 percent of mel with a pink ribbon in his hair, Joe Trdy with NHS written on his bottom, Darrell Schneider and Jackie Chubb with baby bottles, and Paul Vaculin with a baby blanket.

Or even Joyce Swanzy "shooting people" with her baby bottle, Patsy Vansa sucking a pacifier, or Linda Berryhill with diaper pins. It was all part of the wacky world as these new members dressed up as babies for initiation. (Of course, they had to salute the present members with a hearty Goo Goo!)

Randy Tumlinson, be careful when you borrow Joyce Swanzy's bottle. Mrs. Green likes here papers high and dry.

Their free shots. The Buckholts defense includes Debbie Ruzicka, Gall Orsag and Jo Beckhusen. Also Laura June and Terry and Janisue Zajicek.

BOYS GAME

Troy handed the Buckholts boys a 47-25 defeat, outscoring them 69 percent to 38 percent in free shots.

Badger Larry Orsag bucketed 12 points. Dale Walzel totaled 4 and Glenn Roessler put in 3. Early Webb, Paul Mendoza, and Johnny Salazar accounted for the remaining 6 points.

Yoe Drops Game To Caldwell

By Marilyn Hauk

The Yoemen lost to Caldwell 55-71 in a district game. The Yoemen were behind from the beginning with a score of 13-17 in the first quarter. At half the score stood 33-54 and Caldwell remained in the lead for the remainder of the game.

Jackie Chubb was high scorer for the Yoemen with 20 points -- the result of 6 field goals and 8 free throws. Close behind was John Barron with 18 points resulting from 8 field goals and 2 free throws.
